Tonight : Marrion Warren, "Bringing Back the Bay."

by Kate Spinner, Staff Writer

As a part of The SSU Art, Culture, Nature lecture series, author/photographer Marrion Warren will be giving a presentation on "Bringing Back the Bay" tonight at 7:30 in the University Center Wicomico Room.

Marrion Warren's book "Bringing Back the Bay," was published in October by Johns Hopkins University Press. He will focus his presentation on the photographs in his book and discuss "how, when, where, and why he took them," said his daughter Mame Warren, curator of photographs, in her letter to SSU concerning Mr. Warren's presentation.

Mr. Warren said he "would like to make people more aware of the Bay region, and visually show them what the Bay and it's people are like." Through his photography, Warren hopes to make people more aware of the Bay's importance.

Over the course of ten years, Warren has been working on "Bringing Back the Bay." He has received a great deal of help from his daughter and a group of volunteers. The book contains over 250 black and white photographs, short stories and quotations from the people of the Chesapeake region.

Warren likes to use black and white photography because it is simple, and the images will not disintegrate like color photographs. "These photographs are extremely valuable," said Warren. "100 years from now people can look back on the people that make up the Bay culture today."

In his work, Warren emphasizes the people who live and work in and around the Chesapeake. When Warren came to Maryland in 1947, he "immediately became interested in photographing the Bay." "Because of the problems on the Bay," he decided, he "needed to do a book for future history."

Dave Ganoe, Director of the University Center, and the Faculty Cultural Arts Committee, has invited Warren to participate in the Art, Culture, Nature Series. Warren has "chronicled the Bay for years," said Ganoe. "Since the theme this semester is art, culture, and nature, it seems like a natural thing to invite Warren to speak about the effect nature has had on him as an individual and the effect it has had upon his art."

The University owns some of Warren's photographs, and "he has displayed his work in the University Center Atrium Art Gallery four or five times," said Ganoe.

This spring, a series of lectures will "examine nature's effect on the artist and the resulting work as well as the artistic response to pressing environmental conditions," as stated in the Art, Culture, Nature brochure.

Other upcoming events this month include "O Lucky Man," presented as a part of an international film series, on Monday, Feb. 27, at 7 p.m. in the Devilbiss auditorium.

David Barto, will impersonate Henry David Thoreau in the Wicomico Room on Tuesday, Feb. 28, at 7:30 p.m. The Ray Zeigler and Taylor Harvey Dual Organ Recital has been cancelled and will be rescheduled in the fall.

Fire Delayed Dining Services Saturday

Ali Moyer
Feature Editor

A fire broke out around 5 a.m. Saturday morning in the Powell Dining Hall when a deep fat fryer malfunctioned.

Head Chef Jon Desoreau said, "After the malfunction, grease caught on fire and started the fire."

A baker was present to begin preparing for brunch. He was not injured.

Once the fire had begun, a fire suppressant was released from the ceiling to help extinguish the fire. The baking soda like substance covered most of the equipment in the kitchen. All materials and equipment needed to be thoroughly cleaned before use.

Desoreau said he was not sure of the exact amount of damage; however, he was sure it would be less than $2 thousand. The damage was primarily to the fryer.

A modified brunch was served using plastic plates, plasticware and plastic cups. Normal services were restored by Saturday evening's dinner.

SSU Faces Budget Cuts (Again)

The administration announced at the University Forum on Feb 7 that SSU is facing a $640-670 thousand cut next fiscal year.

In addition, the school faces the loss of 13 full time employees, designated by P.I.N. positions. A P.I.N. position is a university employee who receives benefits.

A bill in the Maryland General Assembly might potentially save these positions. The bill would give each school in the University of Maryland System (UMS) the ability to decide where personnel cuts would be made.

The university would still have to cut enough money from its budget to equal the funding for those 13 positions, but it could make cuts in other areas besides personnel.

S.G.A. President Sean Mahoney announced that the S.G.A. would meet with the administration in an attempt to keep students informed of decisions concerning the cuts.

Out For A Swim

After swimming 2,400 miles from the Cape Verde Islands near Ireland to Barbados, Guy Degale, a forty two years old Frenchman, became the first person to swim across the Atlantic Ocean. He did it over a two month period, by swimming for ten hours every day and resting on a fifteen square feet raft that he dragged with him the rest of the day. The raft was packed with everything from concentrated food to a radar device and a computer with video games.

The "Mad Swimmer," as the press named him, had to face numerous perils on his journey before he became a hero in the eyes of the French. Early in his journey he was stung by a huge jelly fish when he was doing his laundry off the edge of the raft. At one point while he was swimming, he was attacked by a shark from behind, but managed to escape the jaws of death by kicking the shark in the nose. To make things worse, huge waves continually slammed his body against the raft causing him to bruise on many occasions.

In spite of the hardships he had to face, Degale managed to find time for scientific research and observation. For instance, he discovered that dolphins kill flying fish by pounding them with their body in mid air. When his journey ended, Degale told the people that waited for him in Barbados that he was glad to find that "Man can still leave in peace with the Ocean".

On Shaky Grounds - South Of The Border

Mexico's president and leader of the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), Ernesto Zedillo, is facing considerable criticism both from within his country and from foreigners who blame him for Mexico's failing economy. Last week, president Clinton provided Mexico with sixty million dollars after Zedillo's fiscal policy had failed to stop the peso from falling. Clinton decided to strengthen the peso after it sunk to almost a third of its original value, because many economists in the US had warned him that the Mexican economy might collapse if he failed to do so.

Zedillo also had to face increasing pressure from the Zapatistas, a guerrilla opposition in South Mexico that had launched a military campaign against the PRI. Last Tuesday Zedillo ordered a cease fire after the Mexican military failed to regain full control of the Chiapas province, where the Zapatistas have captured a number of towns by force. The Zapatistas, who are composed mainly of Mayan Indians, are demanding a wide array of both social and economic reform aimed towards equality.

A Deal Gone Sour

The peace negotiations between Arafat, the head of the Palestinians Liberation Front, and Yitzhak Rabin, the prime minister of Israel, have reached a stalemate. At the time being, neither person is willing or capable to submit to the other's demands. Rabin is demanding that the PLO tighten security in the Gaza Strip in order to prevent further terrorist attacks against Israelis. Right now, however, Arafat seems to politically weak to exercise sufficient control. Arafat is demanding that Israel withdraw from the Western Territories, but Rabin made it clear that the troops will not back out until Israel has some sort of a guarantee that Arafat can, and will, prevent future terrorist assaults.

The peace process came to an halt after Hamas, a Palestinian terrorist group, blew up a tavern near the city of Natanya killing over forty Israelis. The assault was the most recent one in a long series of terrorist attacks that included the bombing of a bus in Tel Aviv and the kidnapping of several Israeli soldiers.

To Unite or Not To Unite

The Iron and Steel Workers Union of South Africa, an white-only workers union that has been a hotbed for white supremacy in South Africa, is currently debating whether or not it should merge with NUMSA, a predominantly black union. The debate comes at a time of economic woes to the auto industry. Recently, in an attempt to internationalize its market, the government decided to drop the tariff it had imposed upon imported cars from 115% to 60%. The increasing foreign competition forced Volkswagen to lay off 15% of its workers. At the same time, jobs that traditionally were considered exclusively white are being taken over by black workers who are demanding affirmative action.

Many white workers argue that most blacks are not educated enough to step into management positions. Opposing the argument, blacks claim that during the apartheid era, the government failed to provide blacks with a decent education system or with sufficient training programs. Despite the tensions between the two unions, in the future they might have no other choice but to unite in the face of growing economic pressure.

year ('95 to '96). All previously funded organizations should have already received a budget request form.

If your group hasn't received a packet or if you are a recognized student organization seeking funding for the first time, please contact Jim Hudson or Lauren Davis at x36182.

WSUR is officially on the air - campus TV channel 11 and 107.5 cable fm. The request line number is still x84760.

The station is now accepting demo tapes for Gullapalooza from all bands of any format. However, to be eligible to perform at the festival in May you must submit a demo tape by Feb 28 to WSUR, SSU box 3064.

"I want to stress that all bands are welcome to perform at Gullapalooza, but we can select only from among the bands who submit tapes.

We are choosing eight bands this year, so get your tape in now," said Alex Varson, WSUR general manager.

"This year's charity is Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Salisbury. We are inviting all campus organizations to participate and we welcome any suggestions for this year's Gullapalooza," added Joe Smith, WSUR operations manager.

Gullapalooza will be held May 6 at the Saint Martins Beach.

S.G.A. Considering Compiling List of Friendly Businesses

The S.G.A. is considering compiling a list of local businesses which are friendly to S.S.U. students. The list would then be distributed to all student organizations. S.G.A. President Sean Mahoney said that the list will be a resource to students when they purchase food and supplies or when they seek sponsorship for student events.

IMA

The Institute of Management Accountants is sponsoring a presentation by FBI Special Agent Gary Rice, in the Great Hall of Holloway Hall at 3:30pm on Tuesday, Feb 28.

"All majors are welcome to attend the lecture," said Beth Speckard, IMA vice president. Rice will be speaking on all employment opportunities in the FBI, such as management, marketing and communications.

This is the first time we've sponsored a speaker from the FBI and we hope he will address a broad range of topics that will be interesting and applicable to all majors.

In Response...

I am writing in response to your letter in the 14 February 1995 edition of The Flyer concerning the collection of newspaper on campus. You may not recall that since the inception of the campus recycling program in September of 1989, we have tried on several occasions to collect newsprint and white office paper (student generated, we already collect it from offices) from several locations on campus.

The initial attempt was made at the Residence Halls in 1990 when we placed bins in the recycling areas at each dormitory building for the collection of white office paper. The bins were removed after several months because students could not realize that these bins were there for recyclable paper, not garbage. We simply did not (and still do not) have the resources to sort the paper from the large amounts of garbage that was thrown in the bins. (At the time, newspaper was not being collected in this area due to lack of a local market.)

About a year ago, we, at the urging of several students, placed bins for the collection of white paper and newsprint outside the post office in the University Center. Since that time, we have had to sort the garbage from the bins each time they are collected, even though they have RECYCLING PROGRAM and NEWSPRINT all over them.

I want our recycling program to be the best in the state. If you can offer some solutions to the trash problem, or offer sorting time to clean the garbage from the recyclable paper, please call.

As a footnote, last year (1994) SSU recycled 16.3 tons of newsprint (32,600 pounds). As an additional footnote, below are the totals for the year 1994.

Aluminum	10,960 lbs.
Glass	40,000 lbs.
Tin	5,300 lbs.
Office Paper	32,570 lbs.
Plastic	4,480 lbs.
Food Waste	365,160 lbs.
Phone Books	262 lbs.
Cardboard	89,690 lbs.
Yard Waste	332,00 lbs.
Magazines	400 lbs.*

* First semester for magazines

Our totals for the year ending December 1994 are:

Total Garbage (to the landfill)	713 tons (1,426,00 lbs.)
Total material recycled	456.5 tons (913,000 lbs.)

39% of our garbage was recycled!

I would be glad to sit and discuss ways to improve the SSU Recycling Program with anyone that can offer intelligent solutions to come of these problems. My impression is that many of the problems stem from lack of education or lack of caring. We attempt to educate. The Flyer can help us educate.

Sincerely,
Les Lutz, Director Horticulture

The Wicomico Environmental Trust at Work

Christina Melander
Flyer Staff Writer

The stretch of Route 13 from the SSU campus to the Centre at Salisbury is a familiar path for all of us. As we drive along, we notice the numerous fast food chains, shopping centers, hotels and car dealerships, but do we ever take note of the creeks that pass underneath the highway?

There happens to be a little creek called Middleneck Branch that runs along side of Pep Boys Auto Body. Until recently, it was so consumed by discarded trash, you probably would not want to see it.

Fortunately efforts have been made and are being continued to clean up the tributary. The manager at Pep Boys is concerned about the environment and has a crew of workers cleaning up the creek's banks every Saturday. Last fall, the Wicomico Environmental Trust (WET) contributed to the clean-up by removing a great deal of trash from Middleneck Branch.

Dr. Ben Fusaro, Professor of Mathematics and Computer Science, has been at SSU since 1974. He considers himself an environmentalist and is one of the founding members who organized the Wicomico Environmental Trust.

WET was established in 1992 in association with The Nanticoke Watershed Preservation Committee and Friends of the Nanticoke, all of which comprise The Nanticoke Watershed Alliance. The Alliance is an effort on behalf of Maryland and Delaware to protect the Nanticoke River and to develop a conservationist vision. Dr. Fusaro views picking up litter as a very common sense sort of practice but said that it "does not get to the heart of the environmental crisis."

Cleaning up other people's mess is an approach that can be labeled as "antiseptic." It provides temporary relief but does not cure the problem.

This is an accepted way of doing things in our society today, but it is very backward. We decide to help only when a situation becomes so bad that it can no longer be ignored. Humankind, as well as the environment would be better served if we developed a new outlook on the world around us.

For example, the fact that Pep Boys has a clean-up crew at work every Saturday means that trash is still being discarded into and along the banks of the creek.

If we all realized that the place for trash is not in a river or on the side of the road and acted on this realization, then the problem would be eliminated. This all boils down to identifying the root of the particular problem and attacking it at that level.

Wouldn't this save a lot of time and hassle for everyone and reduce the stress we place on our environment?

The mission of the Wicomico Environmental Trust is to preserve the natural environment and enhance the quality of life on the Eastern Shore.

Dr. Ben Fusaro on Right, of the SSU Math Department, and David Schultz, V. P. of the Wicomico Environmental Trust.

Promoting a sustainable economy and recognizing the intrinsic value of the shore can and should be compatible, not conflicting interests. Many people often regard environmentalists as radicals who place the needs of nature before man. This is not necessarily the case.

The members of WET are just as concerned about the health and livelihood of humans as they are about wetlands and wildlife.

WET has been involved with several projects such as making and selling bird houses, helping school children choose plants to foster ecological diversity and promoting the Wild Acres Program.

Maggs Offers Ways To Get Into Shape

Mary Beth Vanston
Flyer Staff Writer

For all of you students concerned about those extra pounds you put on over the holidays, about fulfilling your New Year's resolutions to lose a few pounds or if you're just interested in getting in shape, (Spring Break is coming up fast!), then you should check out what's available in Maggs Gym.

I spoke with Wayne Gorrow, Assistant Director of Campus Recreation, and there are several different opportunities for students to become involved in fitness, athletic and aerobic activities. Of course there is the main gym, available for student use, the strength room, and the Nautilus center. Nautilus now has two new treadmills along with the stairmasters, rowing ergometer, exercise bikes, and the free weight equipment.

However, students must participate in an orientation clinic to be eligible to use the equipment in the Nautilus center and in the strength room. The 30-minute clinic is basically a walk-through designed "to increase awareness...provide individuals with an introduction to the activity and proper use of the equipment...and some basic weight training principles." Students can sign up for the clinics in the Campus Recreation office; the clinics are offered at various times during the week.

What many students are not aware of is the Human Performance Lab, which is located on the second floor in Maggs. The Lab's staff will help students evaluate and measure such things as body fat percentage and stress level. The bioelectrical impedance and the skinfold are both methods used to determine body fat. Students can also take advantage of a 12-lead electrocardiogram, which is a complete stress test normally costing about $200 in a doctor's office.

They even have nutrition software available where students can type in their daily meals, and the computer will print out a full profile of your diet, including caloric intake, fat grams and nutritional value. Students can also have done a VO2 Max. test, a leading indicator of aerobic fitness.

Staff members will also help students design a personal fitness program. Susan Muller, who is in charge of the Human Performance Lab, informed me that it might even be possible for students to have a personal trainer if they are interested; there are Health Fitness majors who would probably like to have the experience. Muller said to inquire about that in the Campus Rec. Office. The Human Performance Lab has hours Monday- Friday that are posted on the door.

There are other ways for students to get in shape. Maggs has an open swim and lap swim hours, racquetball courts that are available by 24 hour reservation and a climbing wall. In order to use the climbing wall, students must have an orientation class first. Ask about sign-up times in the Campus Rec. Office. There is also an indoor tennis center located near the Power Professional Building that is available for student use as well.

Campus Rec. also offers step-aerobic classes Monday- Friday. "Step sessions are for all levels wishing to learn basic to advanced step techniques. These sessions also include use of the newest step techniques and add a new dimension in fitness and cardiovascular conditioning. A newly incorporated step and funk session will add a more upbeat workout challenge."

According to instructor Colleen O'Neil, "Step aerobics is a great fat burning and calorie burning workout. It's a fun way to get fit for Spring Break!"

By the way, Campus Rec. will be looking to hire aerobics instructors for next semester. If you're interested, ask Wayne Gorrow in Campus Rec. about it.

Getting involved in the different intramural events is a great way to get in shape and have some fun with your friends.

Sports included are basketball, racquetball, tennis, volleyball, softball, box lacrosse, team handball, and golf. Information concerning entry forms and deadlines is available through Campus Rec.

Studying Abroad Presents an Invaluable Education at an Affordable Price

Monica Tettamanzi
Flyer Staff Writer

If you are a student interested in studying abroad, you have probably asked yourself some of these questions: What's in it for me? What could I gain by studying abroad? Why should I study abroad when the majority of students do not?

Studying abroad has often been misinterpreted on U.S. campuses as something only needed by language majors, an escape from academic pressures, a diversion, an "elitist" activity for privileged ones or just not necessary.

Every year, the world becomes more interdependent, and the value of pursuing some part of your education in another country has become part of a successful career. Students who leave college without a global experience as part of their education will be thought of as not fully educated.

Perhaps you think that the most difficult aspect of studying abroad is to leave the familiar and step into the unknown. However, it is this big difference that makes studying in a foreign country so exciting and attractive.

If you have decided to gain this invaluable education and want to study abroad, here are some steps that you should follow.

When you consider studying abroad, many different programs might sound attractive.

First, there are some formalities that need to be considered: passports, visas and money. Studying in another country in not as easy as going to Florida for spring break. Careful planning and preparation is important.

U.S. students will be required to have:
- a valid passport to enter the country. The passport will be valid for 10 years and will cost $65.
- a visa (depending on the country) that will permit you to stay in the country for a specified purpose and for a limited time. Visas need to be obtained before leaving the United States.

- an International Student Identity Card, which is a basic travel document for students going abroad. It will gain you access to any student discounts available, and the card is available at Council Travel offices for a $16 fee.

SSU has developed a pre-study-abroad checklist. The checklist was created to make choosing a program less

A Real Sweet Pickle Open Across from SSU

Maggie O'Neil
Flyer Staff Writer

In a town with about a total of four bars for excitement, everyone, EVERYONE, knows when a new one opens. The recent hype has been about Pickles, the new bar across from Salisbury State University. For its grand opening day, Sunday, Feb. 12, the turnout was surprising, according to Cynthia, one of Pickles' bartenders. "I wouldn't say it was packed, but around ten o'clock, it was a little harder to move around."

Inside, Pickles is a quaint little place. Done in green and white, it has an air of sophistication that other bars lack. Booths are a key feature in the new layout. Five televisions are on for viewers, and there are three pool tables for those who like pool. Glen Fuestonn, a senior at SSU felt that "the pool tables should be turned the other way." After two games of pool, I had to agree. My stick kept hitting the back wall.

Chris Poist, who runs Pickles with his brother, said their intention is to make Pickles a non-intimidating place, the type "you can walk into by yourself." With afterthought, that is exactly the way I would describe Pickles. It's laid-back, and doesn't have, THANK GOD, that hip-happening-let's-get-drunk-and-make-out kind of air that many bars do. This is probably due to the fact Chris wants Pickles to be promoted as a bar that caters to all people and not just college students.

So here's the run down you've been waiting for: Pickles has no entertainment, i.e., no live bands. They have eighteen different draft beers and their potato skins are good. You can play a decent game of pool if you don't mind slanting your stick in a sixty degree angle. Their menu is great and includes a full range of appetizers, salads and subs ranging in price from $4-6. Dart tournaments will take place on Saturday nights.

Chris Poist hopes to have ten new Pickles' locations within the next five years. He already runs one in Ocean City and one in Baltimore. Since Pickles is one of the best new bars to come to Salisbury, I have no doubt it will be successful. It deserves a thumbs-up rating.

However, when I asked Glen Fuestonn if he would be coming back, he said: "Not unless I have a lot of money."

Okay, so the prices are a little on the high side. But if you're like me, you probably don't mind sacrificing a little of that hard-earned green for a quality atmosphere.

One thing's for sure. I'll be going back.

"Boys on the Side," a Review

Ali Moyer
Feature Editor

"Boys on the Side," starring Drew Barrymore, Whoopi Goldberg and Mary Louise Parker, is currently showing at the Centre in Salisbury.

This dramatic comedy follows three women on their journey from New York to California. The three women end up in Tucson, Arizona, where the rest of the movie takes place.

Holly (Barrymore), Robyn (Parker) and Jane (Goldberg), who quickly become close friends while traveling the country, face several obstacles in their adventure.

I went into the theater expecting a "guy-bashing" comedy. Little did I know tears of sadness would be running down my cheeks.

I was wrong in assuming that this movie would poke fun at guys; it is a serious movie with hot topics, including homosexuality, pregnancy, A.I.D.S. and death.

"Boys on the Side" illustrates the story of a lesbian embarking on a journey with two other women who, despite their many differences, find a common bond.

Holly is on the run after accidentally killing her boyfriend.

At the end of the movie a tragic death brings the women closer and Goldberg sings a terrific rendition of "You've Got It" by Bonnie Raitt.

If you like the previews on television, you'll love the movie!

There are also several sports clubs that are initiated and led by students that provide opportunities for participation in specific areas of interest, but can also provide a chance to get fit. Such clubs include Cycling, Floor Hockey, Martial Arts, Rugby, Outdoor, Sailing, Golf and Weightlifting. If any of these sound interesting, check it out, go to a meeting, get involved!

So even if you don't like to "exercise" or "work-out" in the typical manner, there are plenty of other ways to be active and get in shape. Go over to Maggs and grab a copy of the Campus Recreation schedule and ask someone about the club activities and the orientation clinics.

When you consider studying abroad, many different programs might sound attractive. However, which one is the most appropriate? Thanks to this list, you will be able to eliminate some programs while focusing on those aspects that are more important to you. Some of the issues covered in the checklist are:

- Does tuition cover the cost of books?
- Is financial aid available?
- Are students permitted to seek employment?
- Is the geographical area urban or rural?
- Is food or a meal plan provided?

If you are interested in this checklist, you should contact Agata Liskowska, International Student Advisor, ex. 36313. For any other information, you can also contact Dr. Arlene White at ex.36253 and Jerry Waldron at ex. 36150.

SSU does not administer many foreign study programs. However, the University encourages students to study abroad and acts as a guide by collecting and disseminating information about foreign study programs from a variety of institutions. Students are encouraged to speak with faculty in order to receive pertinent information.

All right, you've decided you are interested in studying abroad, but you're worried about the expense. Well, we'll try to help you out in the next issue of the Flyer.

Job Outlook for College Grads Brightens in 1995

CPS

Brace yourself, college seniors: there's good news on the job front.

After years of doom-and-gloom forecasts throughout the early 1990s, the employment outlook for college graduates finally may be replaced by brighter skies.

"The graduates of 1995 should be entering the best job market in the past four years," said Patrick Scheetz, director of the Collegiate Employment Research Institute at Michigan State University. "Although it's a modest increase, it looks like we're coming out of a dark period for employment."

Scheetz and his associates have released a new study based on surveys of 545 companies. He said that the hiring of this year's graduates will increase 5.9 percent over last year, making 1995 the second consecutive year for gains in employment. In the four years before last year's 1.1 percent increase, new jobs for college graduates dropped by 30 percent.

Thomas Oh, senior research analyst at Hanigan Consulting Group in New York City, agrees.

"Companies are getting back to hiring the people they didn't hire in the early '90s," said Oh. "This year's college graduates have good reason to be more optimistic than ever."

Oh said 29 of the 100 companies he surveyed indicated that they'll increase their hiring of college graduates this spring, while 65 companies will hire the same amount of students as last year. Only five companies said they will decrease the amount of college graduates they'll be hiring.

In 1994, the number of college graduates hired rose by 8.4 percent. The number this year should be even higher, Oh said.

"Students getting their degrees in 1995 face a much better job market than graduates did a few years ago," said Oh. "They will be hearing from more than one company."

That continues an upward trend from 1994, when college graduates entered an improved job market. "It's kind of anticlimactic when you graduate and then have to wait six months to get a job," says Ron Fille, a 1994 graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater. "When I was a sophomore and junior, all I ever read was about how horrible the job market was. I thought I was going to get buried."

But Fille was able to find a job within one month of his graduation, thanks to an early job search and a major that is in demand. "I was one of the lucky ones who majored in computer science," he says. "There were a lot of companies hiring computer geeks like me to help with technical support."

The upwards swing of the 1994 hiring season should continue into 1995, but graduates shouldn't expect to leap into that $50,000 a year job right away. "Employers are reminding students that they still have some learning to do and that they need to show positive performance on the job," said Scheetz. "A lot of times students think job advancement when they should think job performance. Students proved themselves in college, now they have to prove themselves all over again."

Scheetz said that employers will be looking to hire graduates with significant work-related experience and computer skills. "Employers today aren't satisfied with just a degree," said Scheetz, adding that 58 percent of all graduates hired last year had some form of job experience. "Companies today want their new employees to have strong skills in public speaking, writing, and reasoning. Grads should have good teamwork skills and customer service relations abilities, too."

Dawn Oberman, director of the College Placement Council, said that corporate recruiters have indicated that they will be increasing their campus visits in the spring. "It's the first time they've been expanding their searches in quite some time," Oberman said. "That should indicate that companies are looking to hire more graduates."

Like MSU's Scheetz, Oberman said the more work experience a college graduate has, the better. "Students that have a strong record of internships and summer jobs will have the inside track," she said. "Employers want to see that you have some experience working, even if it's a part-time job somewhere, to back up your degree."

Most graduates hired in 1995 will get jobs in the service and manufacturing industries, said Oberman adding that jobs in government and nonprofit organizations will dramatically drop.

Scheetz agreed, predicting that the fastest growing areas of occupation are computer systems occupations engineering, accounting and finance, sales and marketing, medical and health care occupations, environmental fields, sciences and mathematics and economic and community development.

While the employment situation is better across the U.S., job opportunities are especially improved in the Southcentral and Northcentral regions of the nation. Opportunities in the Northwest and Northeast lag behind the rest of the country, but they are still higher than in recent years.

Those entering the job market shouldn't expect a quick search. Although the outlook is brighter than in past years, most students still can expect a six- to eight-month search, said Linn Ann Thomas, placement director at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

"Depending on the range of a job search, most students should assume they will be spending at least six months looking for work," said Thomas. "For some, that's a long wait, but students have to remember that they are looking for a career, not just a job," she said.

Officials at the U.S. Department of Labor predict that job growth for college graduates will continue until at least 2005. Those occupations that show signs of the most growth are teachers, computer systems analysts, engineers, scientists, registered nurses, physicians, physical therapists, social workers, and human services workers.

But the continued growth doesn't necessarily guarantee a job for everyone. Labor officials estimate that 17.9 million graduates will join the labor force in the next 16 years, while only 13.7 million entry jobs requiring college degrees will open up.

The future job market will be more competitive than ever, as graduates will have to vie for the available positions. Still, nearly 25 percent of graduates will end up working in an occupation that traditionally does not require a college degree, the Labor Department predicts.

Men's Lacrosse Gears Up to Repeat

Mike Beardslee
Sports Editor

Last season the Salisbury State men's lacrosse team went 16-0 enroute to a national championship, defeating Hobart, 15-9, before a crowd of 12,178 at Byrd Stadium in College Park, MD. They became the first-ever undefeated national championship team in the 15-year history of the Division II tournament, and the first team to ever beat Hobart in the national championship game.

This year Hobart has moved up to Division I and Salisbury has emerged as the team to beat. The Gulls have been ranked number one by the Face Off '95 Yearbook, Lacrosse Magazine, and College Sports. On Saturday, February 25, at 1:00 in Sea Gull Stadium, the Gulls will put their 37-game regular-season winning streak on the line as they take on Hampden-Sydney in the opening game of their drive for another national championship.

Head coach Jim Berkman said that although winning another championship is not one of the team's goals, "It's in the back of their minds. Playing in the national championship game...it's like eating hamburger all year long and all of a sudden you're eating filet mignon. But this is a new team and a new year. Our team goals are about meeting our potential as individuals and as a unit."

The Gulls have lost four lettermen from last year's starting unit, but they return key players at nearly every position.

Leading the returning players is junior attackman Jason Coffman, a two-time first-team all-American and last year's national player-of-the-year and attackman-of-the-year in Division III lacrosse.

Coffman leads the team in career points with 191 and goals with 118. Last year he set a single-season scoring record for the Gulls by netting 67 goals.

"We're looking forward to another good season," said Coffman. "This year is going to be a lot different without Hobart. We're the top dog, and everyone has to chase us."

Coffman will be joined by second team all-American Sean Radebaugh, who led the Gulls in assists last year with 40, and Paul Smith, who tallied 37 goals and 16 assists. All three started at attack last year.

Second team all-American and team co-captain Dan Mergott heads up the first midfield line. Mergott, a senior, finished with 20 goals and 20 assists last season.

"This is definitely going to be a harder season, but it's going to be fun," said Mergott. "Last year was a special team, but this year we have just as much talent. We could do it again."

National Defenseman-of-the-year and co-captain Chris McQueeney leads the defense for the Gulls. McQueeney, a junior, collected 198 groundballs last year to set a team record.

"This year we want to raise our goals-for average and lower our goals-against-average," said McQueeney. "It's going to be harder this season, but we've got a lot of good freshmen and transfers. We should be all right."

Senior Rob Schmitt (also a co-captain) will complement McQueeney on defense. Jay Owen and Brendan Bellotte will contend for the third starting slot.

Jeremy Michalski will take over as the faceoff man this season. He was part of a unit that won 65% of faceoffs last season.

Sophomores Scott Melvin and Andy Kolchins along with transfer Adam Widener are projected as the top long-pole middies. Brendan Bellotte may also see time as a long-pole.

Perhaps the biggest question mark on this team is in the goal. With the graduation of Erik Miller, last year's national Goalie-of-the-Year and Championship Game MVP, the Gulls must find a competent replacement.

Fortunately, there is no dearth of talent in this area. Senior Tom Murrell, a four-year team member, will see action, and three transfers will probably vie for the starting role: Stash Rote, Justin Nels, and Rich Betcher.

"There's a lot of talent and depth here," said Berkman. "We're excited about who we have available, but also realize that we have some big shoes to fill. Our last three starting goalies have all been all-Americans."

The Gulls scrimmaged Division I Villanova on Saturday, winning 15-5. They open the season on Saturday, and the players are fired up to begin play.

"I'm really excited about the season. I want to get going," said Mergott.

"I'd like to improve on last year. I'd like to start out on fire and whip some teams early," said Coffman.

"This is one of the toughest schedules we've ever had," said Berkman. "It's everybody's highlight to face us. We must come out to play in every game."

Men's Basketball

SSU lost 76-73 on Wednesday to York College. Kyle Jefferson led the team in scoring with 24 points, followed by John DeRichie with 17. Casey Musick tallied 14.

SSU led at the half 38-37 but was unable to keep the edge over York and couldn't tie at the end to send the game into overtime.

The Gulls faced Goucher on Saturday and were able to hold the lead for a 102-101 win. Jefferson led all scorers with 33 points. Musick was a close second with 30. Chuck Harvey poured in 18 points and grabbed 8 rebounds to add to Randy Clark's 8 rebounds.

The score was tied 54-54 at the half, but in the second half SSU fell to a nine point deficit. They managed to catch up and secure the victory off Musick's layup with two seconds remaining.

The Gulls now await postseason games in the CAC playoffs.

Women's Tennis Team Ready to Serve Up a Winning Season

Jeff Brameyer
Flyer Staff Writer

The Salisbury State University women's tennis team is looking forward to another successful season under new head coach John Browning.

Looking to improve on last year's impressive 11-2 record, the Lady Gulls are gearing up for their first match of the year tomorrow against Washington College.

Browning is coming from Pomona College in Los Angeles where he has coached for the past three years. Prior to that, he spent a year and a half at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

He is looking forward to the upcoming season, and although he has not discussed goals with his team yet, he says that they can be successful.

"The girls are really hard workers, and we have some talent. So things have been really fun for me so far," commented Browning.

Coach Browning has high hopes for junior April Quigley, last year's #1 singles player. "She has a strong all-court game, period," commented Browning. "She's very aggressive and has good instincts around the net."

Quigley was 6-9 last year at #1 singles and has emerged as a team leader.

Another veteran from last year's squad will be junior Kathy Castelli, who finished this season, 11-2, at #3 singles and 11-1 in doubles.

"[She is] a tenacious competitor," said Browning. "Castelli is what the tennis world refers to as a 'grinder.' She has good concentration skills and returns a lot of balls. She has become a leader of the team by example."

New on the team this year is freshman Kim Gillis. Browning expects her to make an immediate impact and describes her as, "A great athlete who is very talented. I expect great things from her in the future."

Another impact player on the team will be senior Sue Douglas. "Sue will be knocking on the door for #3 singles all year long and has made great strides in her game," said Browning.

Two other newcomers to the team are freshman Jacklin

Schweigart and transfer student Courtney Harvey.

"Jacklin is a talented lefty and another good athlete who should help us out a lot in doubles," said Browning.

Harvey, a transfer from the University of Maryland at College Park, is able to, "keep a lot of balls in play. She can really stay focused for a long period of time and eventually wear down her

Women's Basketball Wins

Elizabeth Pagel

By a margin of one point, the SSU women's basketball team earned a 63-62 win over Rowan College in their last home game of the regular season on Thursday, February 16.

It was a total team effort, with each player turning in top performances. Forward Amy Fenzel led both teams in scoring with 23 points while grabbing 8 rebounds. Fenzel's powerhouse partner Kim Roth pulled down 16 rebounds and totaled 18 points. Ava Tasker led the defense with 5 steals.

Kristi Kauffman began the game with two of her trademark three-pointers, and the ladies began to settle in. The lead shifted from team to team for the bulk of the first half, and neither team could gain a clear advantage. With seven minutes to go, the Lady Gulls picked it up and pulled

Assistant Coaches Return to Lend a Hand

Jeff Brameyer
Flyer Staff Writer

Every week, those of us at the "Flyer" Sports department pay tribute to those students who play on the some 19 varsity athletic teams here at Salisbury State University.

All too often, however, the efforts of student assistant coaches go virtually unnoticed. Take Bryan Gomes, for example. This is the first year as an assistant coach for Bryan Gomes, a four-year member of the swim team.

Now a graduate student, Gomes is able to stay with the program he has been a part of for so long. "Coming back and coaching for a team you swam for is one of the most rewarding experiences you can have," Gomes commented.

Head swim team coach Mary Jo Tantalo believes that Gomes has an advantage because he is fresh out of the program. She says he can relate to the swimmers on their level easier than she can.

Erik Miller and Ryan Murphy, both members of last year's national championship men's lacrosse team, are back this year, but this time they are looking at things from a different point of view.

The two are finishing up their graduation requirements while helping out the team as assistant coaches.

Miller said, "It's been nice to return the favor to the coach and the team that gave us the (national championship) rings."

Murphy, who is playing for the Baltimore Thunder now, agrees. "I feel I'm able to give back to the team what I'm now learning at the ahead at the half, 29-26.

Rowan came out aggressively in the second half, eventually racking up an eleven-point lead with ten minutes of play remaining. It was a high pressure situation, but according to coach Benshetler, "My girls didn't give up. The defense was ready to make up the deficit."

Brutal defense paired with a scoring streak sparked by Amy Fenzel was the key to putting SSU back in the game. "We used the first half to figure out the team," said Fenzel, "But in the second half we knew we could beat them."

Fenzel finally got her hands on the ball in the second half and poured in 15 points, including the shot from the charity line that tied the game with less than four minutes left. She was fouled and went to the line again, knocking in the two that put SSU on top. Rowan never caught up.

Roth, Kauffman and point guard Nicole Urban each sank shots to secure the win for the Lady Gulls.

"I'm unbelievably proud of the girls. This is a good win, but we aren't losing sight of Saturday's game at Goucher. A win helps us get homecourt for the CAC playoffs," added coach Benshetler.

Every member of the team is looking forward to a possible NCAA Tournament berth, and according to Ava Tasker, "This win really puts us on the map. Rowan is a good team in the rankings, and beating them really helps our chances for the tournament."

opponent."

With the start of the season just around the corner, Browning is unsure of what to expect in terms of the Capital Athletic Conference.

He has, however, seen some of the teams that have been ranked nationally and believes that Salisbury is headed down the road toward national recognition. "[We are] just a few pieces of the puzzle short of that [national recognition]."

The Gulls play their opening match on February 22 at 3:00 versus Washington College. Catch them in action as they try to make a name for themselves.

higher level."

Coaching has been quite a change as well as a valuable learning experience for them. "It takes double the time to coach than it does to just play," commented Miller. "It doesn't just end at practice. There is a lot more involved."

According to Vienna, most of the assistant coaches get paid "Very little to nothing," yet they still continue to support our athletic programs with their time and effort.

Some students are hoping to use their experience as assistant coaches to carry over so that one day they can become head coaches.

Brad Campbell, assistant coach of the men's varsity basketball team, is in that category. Campbell has been a part of the SSU men's basketball team's coaching staff for almost three years now and is gaining valuable experience. He hopes that his experience will help him land his next job; hopefully a graduate assistantship somewhere. Campbell said that handling the mix of studies and coaching hasn't been all that hard, but it isn't getting any easier, especially now that he is student teaching history at Stephen Decatur High.

Campbell said one of the problems of being a student coach is the mixing of friendships and coaching with the players.

Because many of the team members are his peers, Campbell said, "I want to be able to conduct myself in a professional manner."

Campbell has been surrounded by basketball his entire life. His father was a coach, and Campbell has developed a love for the sport.

This love is apparent when you see the sacrifices Campbell makes on weekends and during free time to recruit high school players.

"Some people would tell me I was crazy for doing things like that, but it showed them how committed I am to the program," said Campbell.

There are far too many assistants in the various programs here at SSU to be mentioned in just one article, but their efforts are just as important to the success of their teams.

They are often the link between the head coach and the players, and they provide support and a sense of tradition for the teams. Their unsung efforts are the glue that holds together the program in many cases, and they should be commended for it.

If you like sports, you write well, and you need some extra cash for the weekends, then fill out an application at the Flyer (Room 229, University Center), or come to the interest meeting at 4:00pm on Thursday. Bring a writing sample and plenty of pizza for everyone. For more information call Mike Beardslee at 543-6191.

Coors Light Triathlon Information

The American Cancer Society is now accepting applications for the 1995 Coors Light Triathlon, scheduled for Sunday, May 7 at Schumaker Pond Park in Salisbury. The event is part of the annual Salisbury Festival held each year on the Eastern Shore.

The triathlon, now in its sixth year, has become the primary one-day fundraiser for the American Cancer Society's Eastern Shore Office, with over $80,000 raised during its first five years. With 1995 sponsorship once again by Bill Wyatt and Wyatt Wholesale, Inc. helping to offset race expenses, the bulk of each participant's registration fee goes directly to the ACS. The entry fee is $45.

"This has become a very successful and popular race," said Jim Berkman, one of the three 1995 race directors. "It's been sold out the past several years, and we're encouraging interested participants to get their registration forms mailed as soon as possible."

The triathlon combines a half-mile swim, a 14.5 mile bike ride, and a 3.2 mile run. The registration limit this year is 400 people, and applications have already begun to arrive at the American Cancer Society's Salisbury office.

Entry forms and information are available by contacting the Cancer Society office in Salisbury at (410)749-1624. All applications must be postmarked by April 1, 1995. Once the 400-person field is filled, a waiting list will be established. Applicants will receive a confirmation letter from the American Cancer Society upon receipt of their completed entry.

Amenities include awards to the top three finishers in each of 15 age groups, post race food, random prize drawings, T-shirts, and complete race results mailed to all participants.

The center is located in the two-story, red brick house on the southwest corner of College and Camden Avenues. The new facility includes offices, reception area, the C. Philip Bosserman Peace Library, and two conference rooms to be used for mediation, seminars and other meetings.

The Center was established to help change the parts of our culture that tend toward violent and adversarial resolution of conflict into one that seeks nonviolence as a way of life. This goal is to be accomplished through teaching, mediation of a variety of disputes, training in collaborative conflict resolution, negotiation and dispute resolution systems design and sponsorship of speakers and events promoting the resolution of social conflict by addressing issues of injustice. Our services to the university include training in conflict resolution and mediation skills and mediation of campus disputes. The goals of these programs are to nurture the values of peaceful living in a community; to provide tangible ways for individuals and groups to learn how to communicate constructively, thoughtfully, and with understanding and acceptance for others; and to enhance cooperation among people in conflict so that they see their mutual involvement and responsibility, out of which can come personal and collective empowerment.

We're finally all furnished and ready for company - please stop by, meet the staff and see how the Center has grown and what we have to offer.
